

Closed Caption is a wonderful "invention" for the deaf/hard of hearing. If it weren't for CC, I would not watch TV or videos. As for movies they aren't worth paying a fee for at the theater. The quality of CC at times is very frustrating. Our favorite news channel is WINK-TV but the CC at times is non-existent. Weather should always be CC even though some folks think it is "redundant." When The Weather Channel went to CC, I was amazed at what all they had to say. Not that it was always necessary but then I knew what the weather was at home and across the country and world. Some programs are just garble with the CC so one just clicks to next channel. Channel 2 here in the Ft. Myers/Naples area is giving us a very poor reception--picture and CC. When the Twin Towers were attacked, I knew what was happening because of the CC. Now if that can be done why not all the time and with 95-99% accuracy. Some of the national news channels are CC for a short period of time--so again a click to the next channel.
